

October 16, 2025: On Donald Trump and MAGA 'Populism'

Donald is selling out on America faster than we can say 'Orange Man Bad.' His legacy is being cemented in front of our eyes. He truly has chosen terrorism, cronyism, and Nazi-ism as his path to 'Save America'.

Steve Bannon says MAGA populism will win — as Trump is surrounded by billionaires

Every morning, I am reminded of how much abusive waste is caused by Donald Trump's team of threatening militurds.

There is no reason left to defend his team of liars, preeners, and 'centrally-cast' actors as they continue to show themselves to be the epitome of American ignorance.

"There is, then, evidence that Trump's language is highly distinctive, but that this distinctiveness aligns him with scenarios of casual conversation. Although his language, both in content and in style, is odd for a political leader, it is familiar to his audience. It is the true language of populism."

It couldn't have been more than a few days before my dad said he wanted to introduce me to Donald Trump himself. They weren't friends, exactly. But Dad worked hard, and Trump liked that—I'd seen photos of them posing together, shaking hands. So one day my father took me to Trump's office. "This is my daughter," Dad said, and his voice sounded proud. Trump couldn't have been friendlier, telling me it was fantastic that I was there. "Do you like kids?" he asked. "Do you babysit at all?" He explained that he owned several houses next to the resort that he lent to friends, many of whom had children who needed tending. I said yes, I'd babysat before, omitting the fact that the last
